Arson attempt at Whitfield School

Arson has been ruled as the cause of a fire that damaged the old Whitefield School on Friday night.

Damage was minimal, however, thanks to a fire alarm system in the building. The alarm went of at 11:39 p.m.

Fire Chief Dan Wandell first estimated the damage at $5000 and later downgraded that figure to $3000.

The fire was set near a bulkhead at the back of the building. It was centered around a window in the back hallway of the building.

The fire was at least the eighth in recent weeks which can be blamed on an arsonist. Attempts have been made to burn the "bug house", the old Town Hall, the Ristuccia ice arena, and other buildings as well.

Wandell credited the saving of the Whitefield on three factors: the alarm system, fire stops in the walls, and an agressive attack by firefighters.

The building is no longer a school and is now used by the Wilmington Public Buildings Dept.

Special town meeting Sept. 28

A special town meeting has been scheduled for Mon., Sept. 28. The Wilmington Board of Selectmen called the meeting to deal with a rezoning article submitted by Atty. Joseph Courtney for Danco Development Corp., which seeks to rezone a 40-acre parcel off Andover Street. It is presently zoned R60, and Danco seeks to have it rezoned to R20.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski told selectmen that two other individuals had petitions circulating for town meeting articles.

The land in the Danco article is the same parcel which the firm sought to rezone to PRD for condominium development at the annual town meeting in April.

Last week, the Mass. Water Resources Authority named the site as one of twelve under consideration for a facility to incinerate or compost sludge from the Deer Island sewage treatment plant.

Sludge plant unlikely, says TM

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski told selectmen Monday night that the likelihood of a sludge disposal facility on Andover Street was slight.

The possibility of a sludge facility was raised last week by the Mass. Water Resources Authority. The Wilmington site was named as one of 12 possible locations for a facility to dispose of sludge from the Deer Island sewage treatment plant.

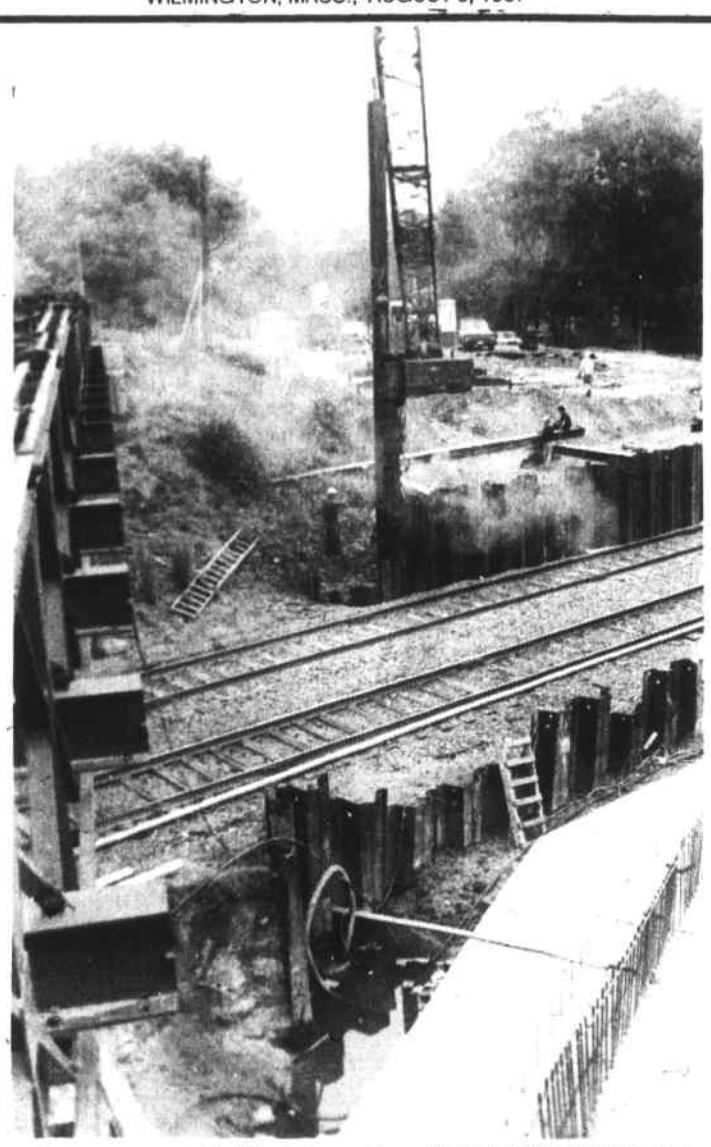

In naming the site, the MWRA referred to it as being on Ballardvale Street, while it is really off Andover Street.

"If this is the extent of the engineering, this is a long way off," said the town manager.

He said that it was important, though, for the board of selectmen to write letters and make its feelings known.

The MWRA does not have eminent domain powers, nor does it have the right to go on property, he said.

Stapczynski said there could possibly be houses built before the engineering studies for the sludge facility are complete. There is a warrant article for the upcoming special town meeting which seeks to rezone the land from R60 to R20.

Bridge work Lake Street is a noisy neighborhood these days, as a pile driver installs steel supports for the new railroad bridge. In the foreground is a concrete pad. The old bridge is at the left.

$40,000 fine for wetlands violations

A Billerica man has been fined $40,000 for wetlands violations at the old Shawsheen Pines airport on the Wilmington - Billerica line.

Leonard Caporale, of Billerica, was given a 30-day House of Correction sentence, suspended for five years, and a $40,000 fine in the first criminal prosecution of the State Wetlands Protection Act in Middlesex County. In addition to the sentence and fine, Judge John Paul Sullivan imposed a number of probationary terms whereby Mr. Caporale is required to:

- Comply with the outstanding Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) order;
- Identify the wetlands;
- Monitor the groundwater;
- Propose a plan to clean up and close the Billerica dump;
- Permit access to state and local officials;
- File notice of the dump at the Registry;
- Comply with all appropriate federal/state/local regulations.

Leonard Caporale and Alexander Realty Trust III of Billerica pleaded guilty last April to seven counts of violating the Wetlands Protection Act and 16 counts of illegal landfill violation. Caporale was also found guilty by Judge John Paul Sullivan of one count of threatening a state DEQE employee.

District Attorney Harshbarger said, "The successful prosecution and sentencing of this case marks the turning point in the protection of our wetlands and environment. The Legislature has defined these types of actions as crimes. The statute is there, the penalty is there and today we were successful in enforcing these laws to protect our precious and diminishing groundwater supply."

Last April, Caporale pleaded guilty to excavation and alteration of wetlands, and to the deposition and burial of refuse on property in Billerica and Wilmington owned by Alexander Realty Trust without an Order of Conditions or dump site assignment, and failure to comply with a wetlands order. These activities took place between October 1981 and August 1984. Additionally, Caporale pleaded guilty to operating and maintaining an illegal dump from September 1984 to November 1985.

"This has been a long and frustrating case for environmental officials," commented Assistant District Attorney James Howard, who handled the case for Harshbarger. "The defendant continually refused to cooperate with environmental authorities, resulting in this criminal prosecution. District Attorney Harshbarger is very concerned with maintaining a safe environment and will continue to prosecute these important cases to the fullest extent of the law."

Two arrested for warehouse thefts

Over $100,000 in merchandise has been stolen during the last several months from the Lechmere warehouse in North Wilmington. Two men have been arrested and a warrant is out for a third man resulting from a three month investigation.

Scott Surrette of Malden was arrested on August 4, after allegedly selling several miniature TV's to an undercover security officer.

Philip Greco of Lowell was arrested July 31, after allegedly selling a variety of items to an undercover security officer.

The three-month investigation was initiated by Security Chief Lawrence Jordan of Lechmere after shortages appeared at the Wilmington facility. An outside security firm was contacted and an officer placed in the warehouse as a regular employee.

Contact was made. The officer was provided with marked bills and told to arrange to buy anything.

Jordan then aproached Wilmington Police Chief Bobby Stewart. Stewart felt one more buy would be necessary and set the detectives in motion. The undercover officer arranged another buy and detectives Mark Jepson, George Shepard and Mike Celata of the Wilmington police staked out the area. The exchange was arranged for July 31 at the end of Ballardvale Street in a secluded area of Ballardvale Park. The detectives were ready with video cameras and still cameras. The exchange was made. According to police, the suspect, Greco, delivered the merchandise and helped load it into the trunk of the undercover officer's car. A list of the items was also recovered by police.

Greco was arrested at the scene.

Recovered goods Sgt. George Shepard and Det. Michael Celata display electronic goods recovered from thefts at the Lechmere Sales warehouse on Ballardvale Street.

Blomley RMLD general manager

The Reading Municipal Light Department, (RMLD), Monday evening voted that Jim Blomley is to succeed Norbert Rhinerson as general manager. Blomley was elected by a three to two vote. The appointment is still open to salary and other negotiations.

Blomley had been the assistant general manager for the past 12 years. He should be installed in his new position by the first of September.

Blomley has been employed by the RMLD for 24 years.

Progress report on traffic lights

Traffic lights at Federal Street in Wilmington and North Street in Tewksbury have been on hold for nearly a year, while engineers designed a new suspension system for the stop light.

Rep. Jim Miceli is scheduled to meet with the chief engineer of the Mass. D.P.W. on Mon. Aug. 17 to discuss the matter.

The new suspension poles for the lights are scheduled to be delivered this month. If all goes well, the job could be completed by November, said Dick Wilson, an aide to Miceli.

Open space plan unveiled for Wilmington

With privately-held open space rapidly disappearing, remaining open space in Wilmington is becoming increasingly important.

On Monday night, a consultant presented a preliminary open space plan before the Wilmington Board of Selectmen.

Faith Ingulsrud of IEP, Inc. said the purpose of the plan is to promote health and quality of life in the town through preservation of open space.

Aquifer protection is a primary goal, to ensure a safe water supply. Other benefits are flood control, recreation use, protection of wildlife, scenic views, and historical and cultural context -- knowing where the town came from.

The open space plan was developed under a guideline issued by the Mass. Department of Conservation Services. The open space plan has two phases of study, information gathering and analysis.

Among the recommendations included in the open space plan are: prevent incremental filling and taking of wetlands; develop greenways along streams and rivers; prevent contamination of aquifers. The plan also recommends restoring portions of the Middlesex Canal, and investigation of pre-historic and historic areas, to promote the historic heritage of the town.

In order to improve recreation opportunities in the town, the plan recommends the developing of trails and passive recreation areas, and providing parks within walking distance of all neighborhoods.

A general recommendation is the formation of an open space committee. This would be done as a subcommittee of the Conservation Commission, under which the plan was developed.

IEP has developed an opinion survey on open space needs. It is available from the Conservation Commission in Room 6 of the Town Hall.

State taking survey on recreation needs

In an effort to identify the Commonwealth's open space and outdoor recreation needs the Department of Environmental Management (DEM) on behalf of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs has recently launched a major survey initiative that will seek input from Massachusetts' 351 cities and towns, profit and non-profit environmental organizations, federal and state agencies and over 3000 Massachusetts residents. The results of this study will reflect the outdoor recreation needs of Massachusetts citizens, identify recreation participation patterns, and determine to what extent outdoor recreation needs are being met by the Commonwealth.

Information gathered will serve as data for the 1988 Massachusetts Statewide Comprehensive Outdoor Recreation Plan (SCORP). Scorp is a state document that is required by the National Park Service. The Scorp must be produced every five years in order for Massachusetts to qualify for federal funding for outdoor recreation, conservation, and open space project funding. Funding is then made available to municipalities on a competitive and matched funding basis.

Over the past five years the SCORP initiative has provided more than 166 Massachusetts municipal projects with almost $7 million in financial assistance.

The SCORP is a crucial document for it not only ensures that Massachusetts is eligible to receive federal funding, but it can also serve as an important planning tool for municipal open space and recreation planners," said Katherine Smith DEM SCORP Director.

"As development pressures increase, the people of the Commonwealth are faced with critical decisions for the protection and enhancement of our natural and cultural resources. The states effort to produce a comprehensive outdoor recreation plan will provide city and town planners with vital information needed to make these decisions."

The SCORP Program is funded in part by a $200,000 grant from the National Park Service. The plan is expected to be released in the late spring of 1988.

INGROWN NAILS WHAT CAN BE DONE?

Ingrown toenails are one of the most common complaints that cause people to seek the attention of a Foot Specialist - Podiatrist. This disorder is usually caused by an inherited abnormal curvature along the side on the toenail, a thickening caused by damage of the nail or fungal infection of the nail.

Correction is usually aimed at removal of the ingrown portion of nail, elimination of an infection that may be present and destruction of the root which causes the ingrown or thickened nail.

These procedures are done under local anesthesia on an out-patient basis in either the office or hospital.

In 1980, Paul Buonopane owned lots 94A and 94, and David Newhouse owned 94B. Newhouse approached the selectmen to buy lot 95. They sold it to Buonopane, but with a deed restriction making 94, 94A and 95 all one lot, not to be subdivided.

Buonopane recently subdivided his land, selling the right side of lot 94 plus lot 95 to Newhouse (area in dark lines).

Buyer seeks to lift restrictions on lot once sold by town

Wilmington selectmen are again wrestling with problems relating to a lot of former town-owned land.

Attorney Dan Brown appeared before the board on Monday night asking that deed restrictions be lifted on a lot on Faulkner Avenue.

In 1980, builder David Newhouse approached the board, wanting to buy a 50 foot lot, lot 95 on map 55. He already owned lot 94B, next door.

Because he did not own a house on adjoining property, selectmen were not abot to make the sale to him. The owner of lot 94A, however, did qualify because he also owned lot 94, which ran across the back of the other lots and thus adjoined lot 95. The selectmen therefore sold lot 95 to Paul Buonopane for $200.

When the selectmen would sell land to an abuttor, it was with the understanding that the land would be added to the owner's houselot.

To ensure this, the deed from the town is written in such a way as to bind the parcels together, prohibiting subdivision.

This has led to problems. How does the town monitor these lots, to make sure that the person buying the land from the town doesn't subdivide?

Buonopane recently sold lot 95 and a portion of lot 94 to David Newhouse for $40,000. Somehow, the deed restriction got past an attorney, and the sale went through. But now Newhouse is unable to get a building permit on the property. So he is asking to have the deed restriction lifted by the selectmen.

The matter is further complicated by the situation of the family wanting to buy the house that Newhouse hopes to build. Dennis and Carol Boisvert recently sold their home on Crescent Street and are desperately in need of a home. While they are waiting for the completion of their new home, they are living with her parents in Saugus, with their belongings stored in several locations. The want to have their children in Wilmington schools next month.

Chairman Bob Cain said that if the restriction were to be lifted, it would have to be done at town meeting, and he would expect some compensation to the town.

Brown said that the compensation was out of order, because it was an ancient transaction, now complete: Furthermore, he said, a great hardship now exists.

"The reason we're here now is that the deed restriction is in place. Both Mr. Buonopane and Mr. Newhouse knew of that restriction. The town gave up the property for $200 in exchange for a restriction," said Cain. Perhaps a figure could be arrived at for what the property would have sold for in 1980.

Selectman Jim Stewart said he thought the town would be going beyond its scope of power in asking for money for land it does not own.

The matter is being referred to town counsel.

Family Inn to benefit from Mike Barry's endurance run

The Family Inn in Brookline is a labor of love for Charlie Fiske (left) and Mike Barry. Charlie and Marilyn Fiske founded the Family Inn to house families of patients awaiting organ transplants. Mike will take part in the Cape Cod Endurance Triathalon next month to raise money for the Family Inn.

An "Ironman" triathalon is not something easily undertaken. It involves swimming 2.4 miles, then bicycling 112 miles, and finally running a full marathon, 26.2 miles.

Former Wilmington resident Mike Barry will be taking part in the 5th Annual Cape Cod Endurance Triathalon on Sat., Sept. 12. The race begins at 7 a.m. and should take 10 1/2 to 11 hours.

For Mike, the endurance run is a matter of charity. He is competing solely to raise money for the Family Inn in Brookline.

Five years ago, a child named Jamie Fiske was in need of a liver transplant. Her parents, Charlie and Marilyn Fiske, had to endure a long wait for a liver to become available. While their daughter was hospitalized in Minnesota, they lived in a boarding house near the hospital.

Having endured the experience of their daughter's transplant, the Fiskes have gone to work to ease the burden of families with someone in need of an organ transplant.

One of their first triumphs was a bill in the Massachusetts legislature which established the Organ Transplant Fund. That fund has raised over a half-million dollars.

Their newest project is the Family Inn, a home for families with someone hospitalized and awaiting an organ transplant.

The project was initiated three years ago with a $250,000 gift from Mrs. Jean Yawkey. A Victorian home in Brookline was purchased, and renovations began in May.

Mike Barry's interest in the Family Inn comes from the fact that he has liver damage due to several years of alcohol and drug abuse. He reached a point, however, when he realized that he was wasting his life. Now 38 years old, he is a junior at U-Mass Boston, majoring in psychology.

Mike's life outside the classroom revolves around two primary activities -- running and speaking. He has competed in more than 100 road races, nine marathons, 20 international distance triathalons and two endurance trithalons.

As a speaker, Mike visits school groups with a strong message on drug abuse. He is a full-time consultant for the FCD Foundation (Freedom from Chemical Dependancy).

After having seen their son almost die from drug abuse, Leo and Kay Barry of Chandler Road are both thankful and proud to have their son alive and rehabilitated.

Donations for the Family Inn may be sent in care of the University Bank, 25 Needham St., Newton MA 02158, Att: Joanie Jaxtimer.

POSSIBLE TAX SHELTER -- LIFE INSURANCE

There aren't so many tax shelters around, since the new tax law, but life insurance -- most especially the single-premium life policy -- is looking better than ever in some situations.

Proponents point to two advantages to these policies: the cash value grows tax-deferred as long as the policy is in force, and you can borrow a large percentage of the cash value tax free and at low cost. What you "borrow" from the policy does not count as income in determining taxability of Social Security payments nor a child's eligibility for student aid. If you never pay back the loan, that amount will be deducted form the proceeds.

There are some negatives. This is not basic insurance to protect a family; it's too cash-intensive for that. There are insurance costs and other charges that can cut into cash buildup. Gains are not guaranteed. And the favored tax status of life insurance could change. Choose such an investment carefully.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

A bill presently before the House Ways and Means Committee on Beacon Hill seeks to address the issue of conservation and open space land in the cities and towns of the Commonwealth. And though the intentions of the supporters of this legislation are merited, they have reportedly done a mediocre job of putting their proposal together in a palatable form.

The Land Bank Bill would impose a one percent tax on the sale of homes in Massachusetts. And though a single percentage point may sound minimal, with the price of houses today it would be an amount in the thousands, which is money families can well use themselves.

Each individual community would be given the right to establish the tax. Ironically, the bill has its origins with Republican members of the Legislature who represent the Cape, and who were concerned with protecting water resources in their districts. And as Barbara Anderson, Executive Director of Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT) told us, "The bill then went out of control."

Suddenly, numerous home rule bills were coming to Beacon Hill which would allow many communities in the state to implement this new tax. As it was impractical to act on a stack of different bills which essentially dealt with the same subject, a single omnibus bill was developed.

In its final form, the Land Bank Bill calls for the seller of a home to pay a one percent tax on the selling price, with the money going to a local land bank. Herein, 50 percent of the monies could be used as determined by the community, 25 percent for affordable housing, and 25 percent for the purchase of open space. In cities, 75 percent of land bank funds would have to be earmarked for housing.

As many on the Hill were quick to suggest that the seller would simply be passing the tax on to the buyer, thus hurting people purchasing their first house, the bill was altered so as to exempt sellers from the one percent tax, when they could prove that the person buying their home had not previously been a home owner. How anyone would 'prove' they were a first time home buyer, has yet to be determined.

Barbara Anderson at CLT is an outspoken opponent against this new tax proposal. Anderson says, "We're not opposed to buying land. But, the obvious way to do that is with a Proposition 2 1/2 override. To tax one portion of the people is simply wrong." And, commenting on the bill's present political chances, Anderson pointed out, "I think they've got a problem. It's badly drafted, and they have a formidable opponent in the chairman of the house taxation committee."

State Representative John Flood, Democrat from Canton, chairs the taxation committee in the House. Flood is opposed to the Land Bank Bill. He cites his opposition to a new tax in the Commonwealth, and the many flaws the Land Bank Bill contains. Flood points out that large scale purchasing of land takes that same land off the tax rolls, adding a financial burden to everyone else. And, referring to the fact that the bill would require cities to use 75 percent of their land bank funds for affordable housing, Flood stated, "Were creating a magnet to the cities for those who can't afford housing. That makes a two tier society."

As an alternative to the Land Bank Bill, Flood has wisely introduced legislation which would allow for a voluntary check off box on local tax bills, whereby citizens could freely contribute to a local land bank fund, thus avoiding any mandatory one percent tax on the sale of their homes. State Rep. Jim Miceli of Wilmington favors Flood's proposal, calling it "more democratic".

Rep. Geoffrey Beckwith is a member of the taxation committee. Referring to the Land Bank Bill, Beckwith said, "I do not believe that a real estate transfer tax is fair and equitable." Beckwith feels that the price of high quality environmental life in a community should be paid by everyone, and not just a small group of people who are making arrangements to move. Rep. Beckwith criticized the Land Bank Bill, saying then when adopted by a local town meeting, most of those taxpayers will not be moving, and thus exempt from any new tax burden.

As an alternative, Beckwith would support local option on establishing a small fee that all citizens would pay annually toward a local land bank. To establish this tax, Beckwith would require a vote of town meeting, as well as a general referendum. Consequently, Beckwith will not support the Land Bank Bill, and would like to put together broad base legislation for his proposal.

Just as voluntary contributions to wildlife have brought in large sums of money on the state income tax form, so too can voluntary contributions from local property tax statements help conservation. Rep. Flood's bill should be enacted by the Legislature, as the Land Bank Bill seems to be dead on arrival.

At the same time, Representative Beckwith has an idea well worth considering. He says Flood's bill "is not a land bank proposal", but simply a local donation version which will not raise sufficient monies. Beckwith's idea is merited in that the community would first have to get the thumbs up from a town meeting and a referendum question. Furthermore, with everyone contributing, the fee could be quite nominal, as opposed to a thousand or more dollars that would be paid solely by home sellers under the present land bank proposal. A combination of donations from tax bills, and local option for establishing a schedule of small fees, are alternatives to the land bank bill well worth considering.

The Humble Farmer

Experience a full game situation

My psychologist friend Addler doesn't care for bright, sunny days. The last time I was in his office he flopped on his couch, bit his nails, and expounded on the potential profits in fog, cold and drizzle.

"I'll take overcast and an 80 percent chance of showers any day," he cried. "My business is dependent upon goosepimpled arms and a miserable runny nose. That's when complete persons withdraw deep into themselves, trusting that introspection will reveal a cohesive, holistic meaning of life."

I pretended to understand and said, "That sounds depressing."

"It is. Nothing generates emotional turmoil like an honest search for inner tranquility. On any given rainy week I can take in six new patients. Usually they're crushed with guilt for having money enough to jet to Mexico while their poor friends have to dig in here and suffer. It's a terrible thing to have more money than you can comfortably spend."

"That's where you can help."

"Right. The microcosmic redistribution of wealth is my specialty. Unfortunately, although I'm expensive I'm also very good at what I do - my patients are always getting better and leaving me. To be completely honest with you, 16 hours of daylight filled with warm sunshine also moves the recovery along at a breathtaking pace. And, as I said, there's seldom a new patient at the door when the weather is good."

"Hmmm - given a choice between a summer of beach picnics or intensive hour-long gut spilling sessions with you - which would I do?"

Addler bolted upright on the couch. His beanie with the propeller on top tumbled to the floor.

"Why would you need professional help?" he laughed. "As long as I've known you you've been trying to claw yourself up into that class of people which can afford egos. I have yet to meet a man two months behind on his house payments who bragged that he was a complete person trying to find himself."

"So business slacks off in the summer," I said quickly. "Have you ever thought of getting out there and knocking on doors? I mean, if you'd read the local paper to find out what's going on in the community and then talk with people until they let their guards down and confess their worries, things might brighten up for you - even on the nicest days."

Addler pulled a sheaf of papers from a shelf on the wall and said, "If there is any hope for this summer it lies in education. I've helped write the curriculum guide for our softball education program over at the school. After months of evaluating the latest available criteria, most of us agreed that students should develop a level of physical fitness commensurate with their individual capacities."

I sucked in my gut and said, "Don't forget - each kid should also do as much as she or he is able."

"Listen to these objectives. The concept is Softball. 'Students will understand equipment used: bats, balls, playing field, gloves, bases. Students will understand infield and outfield positions. They will learn the proper mechanics of throwing and batting: stance, swing, overhand, underhand, sidearm.'"

"I suppose it would be impossible to teach softball without a written curriculum guide to file with the state department of education," I mumbled.

My friend was trembling like a father holding his first child. He lowered his voice before continuing in a reverent tone: "How's this for a suggested learning activity?--'Students will experience a Full Game situation.' It's on the playing field that tomorrow's financial giants learn the value of teamwork."

I couldn't disagree with that. Everyone knows that the most successful safecracking gang in France had used the same locker room in high school.

My father -- God speed

by Arlene Surprenant

Dying is never easy. To watch someone close slip away as one by one his bodily functions cease to function is perhaps the hardest thing in the world.

Though my father died Monday our goodbyes were said the week before. We were all there as the doctors said he wouldn't survive this latest in a series of heart attacks which have dogged his steps over a 30-year period.

After his first heart bypass operation nine years ago, doctors had said Dad's chances of surviving another operation were non-existent. Now the doctors were saying a second bypass was his only hope.

How we clung to that hope in those sterile hospital quarters as we awaited the results of enzyme tests and the doctors' evaluation of heart damage before the go-ahead was given.

We drank coffee and passed around the aspirin bottle which did nothing to relieve our tension headaches. We did crosswords. We read the same paragraph over again. We took walks down the hall. We held hands and stared into space. We prayed-hard.

We shared memories and love and felt again that special closeness of a large knit family. At times, we exchanged family gossip and laughed raucously -- inappropriately -- over the most trivial anecdotes, anecdotes which offered relief from frustration and fear and clearly revealed our state of mind. The hours passed somehow. Through it all, mom remained our tower of strength.

It was another day before surgery got underway. Boy Wonder they called the young surgeon. When the operation went without a hitch, we were ready to feel he had earned his reputation. The nurses were businesslike as they stuck in their tubes and hooked dad up once again to the heart-lung machine. Dad's heart was beating and he was alive.

Only after we made the long drive home did we learn of the complications. Arrhythmic heart beats. Permanent paralysis from the waist down. Kidney failure. And finally -- blessedly most would say -- a coma.

Dad always taught by example. He taught us to enjoy the simple things in life. To place our trust in God to get us through each day. To work hard and learn from failure. To be practical and use our common sense. To hold fast to family and family traditions. To love our fellow man and use our talents to benefit others.

The waiting is over. Now the memories come. I sit over my third cup of dad's tea remembering the man who gave me life. He's there laughing. Strumming his banjo. Singing the old songs that stick so in my mind. He's there caring so deeply for his family. For others. Fingering his well-worn Bible. Thirsting after life. Vital. Steady. Alive.

That's how I'll remember him. My father -- God speed.

Tewksbury's land giveaway

by Bill Conlon

Selling off surplus town land is one thing, but last week's so-called auction by the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen was something else.

The purpose of the "auction" was two-fold: For the town to accept money from the outright sale of the land, and to place the properties back on the tax rolls to generate future revenues.

But the auction was not a true auction at all. It was a simple land sale, limited only to those with adjacent properties, and it was sadly done within the strictures imposed by Article IX, Section 9 of the town by-laws.

Since direct abutters were the only ones able to buy the properties offered, only the abutters were even notified of the sale. Spectators would have enjoyed the show at the Tuesday night board of selectmen meeting.

With more than 2.58 acres up for sale by the selectmen last week, all of it in small chunks and many of those located in crowded South Tewksbury, the town should have received a substantial windfall from the sale. The price of land in Tewksbury has skyrocketed in recent years, and any piece of dirt that has room to put a house is worth in excess of $50,000 no matter how small the parcel. In some parts of a town, an acre of undeveloped land may pull down well over $100,000. Tewksbury land is a hot item.

Instead, the town received only $42,200 from the sale of all 2.58 acres. Admittedly many of the properties, but not all, were too small for buildings. Four parcels, in fact, were over 10,000 square feet in area, and all were acquired by builder Armando Decarolis for a mere song. A fifth potentially buildable lot was picked up by his daughter, Sue Decarolis, again for pennies.

Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Bill Hallisey admitted during the meeting that he met in advance with Decarolis, both to decide which parcels of town land the builder wanted, and to find out how much he'd be willing to pay for them. What Decarolis got for his money was staggering.

In South Tewksbury, most of the existing homes are located on lots of 10,000 square feet of area or less. As a result of the sale, Decarolis picked up four lots of at least 11,250 square feet each, thanks to the town's generosity. For only $7,200 -- the price of a cheap foreign car -- Decarolis picked up enough land to build perhaps four more houses in South Tewksbury. The profits could be outrageous.

Of course, the board of appeals would need to grant a variance for someone to build on a lot of under one acre in size. But judging by the appeals board voting record, that kind of approval borders on the automatic, especially in South Tewksbury.

Throughout the Tuesday night auction, Tewksbury attorney Kevin Sullivan, to his ultimate credit, attempted to bids on certain parcels. However, since in most cases Sullivan did not own adjacent land, the chairman flatly refused the attorney's offers, and refused to even allow the bids into the meeting minutes.

At one point, even Selectman Charles Coldwell could stand it no longer and jokingly made a bid on a 11,250 square foot parcel in South Tewksbury. Hallisey rejected the humor, then rejected a competing bid from Kevin Sullivan, before allowing Decarolis to purchase the property for only $1,800 -- the minimum price asked.

Only once did Sullivan have a chance to bid, and he managed to buy a 9,000 square foot property through genuine bidding -- the only competitive "auction" of the evening. The minumum price of $3,300 was raised by Sullivan to $5,000 before his competitor, Richard Sughrue, retired. What happened next was indeed curious.

The next piece of land up for sale abutted the one Sullivan had just purchased. Mr. Sullivan made a bid on the parcel, since he was now, logically at least, an abutter through his previous purchase.

Chairman Hallisey instead ruled that Sullivan would not be considered an abutter until the deed was filed, a legal process measured in weeks, not minutes. Since Sughrue was a direct abutter, he picked up the 6,750 foot lot for the minimum $2,300.

While Hallisey apparently ran the sale in accordance with Article IX, Section 9 of the town by-laws, a few things need to be changed, now that the dust has settled a bit.

First, the by-law states that minimum bids shall be the amount of taxes owed on the land, plus a service charge. Emphasis here is on the word "minimum." Without any conflict to the town, the minimum bids on the lots sold last week could easily have been five to ten times what they were. The entire $42,200 raised in the sale could have been made up in just one of the "buildable" transactions.

Next, the by-law states that undersized parcels must be legally joined with adjoining property to make one, single lot. Legal covenants joining the land to abutting properties were notably absent during the auction. Potentially buildable properties sold last week will be kept under close scrutiny in the coming months.

Finally, since the board of appeals has a tendancy to wink at acre zoning, especially if sewer service is available, any lot of 10,000 square feet or more should be offered to the general public. The by-laws should be changed to allow public input when the sale of public property is involved.

The "auction" last week was a doozy -- and the echoes will be heard for weeks to come.

Stickney Well The Stickney Well in North Reading, located on a small hill, as it appeared in August 1985.

Pollution source? Who knows?

From what place came the TCE (trichloroethylene) which caused the closing of the Stickney well in North Reading, in 1978? It was the principal source of water for that town. Since that date North Reading has had a problem about water supplies.

TCE and its companion PCE (tetrachloroethylene) have the same appearance as water. Both are odorless and tasteless. Both are reported to be carcinogenic (cancer causing). It was the publisher of the North Reading Transcript, a biochemist, who made the original discovery of the TCE. He analyzed some water which he had drawn from the kitchen faucet, in his home.

TCE and PCE are industrial type hydrocarbons, as are benzenes and tuolenes. Toilet bowl cleaners and other household cleaners have been reported to have as an ingredient, industrial hydrocarbons. Paint thinner and degreasers can be included in the list.

Last week the Wilmington Town Crier published a map showing some of the trouble spots near the Stickney well, which is only 100 feet from the Wilmington boundary.

One noteworthy site, northerly of Honeywell, off Fordham Road, and westerly of that road is the site of a heavy concentration of xylene. Xylene is not an industrial type solvent, this paper has been told. It comes from gasoline, used in the motors of trucks and autos.

There has never been any construction on what can be called the xylene site. The site is in a heavy growth of brush, maple trees, etc., 15 to 25 years old, by guess. The growth is about 800 feet long, along Fordham Road, and the xylene site is in the center of the growth.

About 25 years ago a superhighway, now Interstate 93, was constructed along the eastern part of Wilmington. Ruthless operators, termed "gravel merchants" stripped every possible site for gravel and fill, to be used in the construction of 93.

It could be that the trucks or power shovels left residue on that site where the xylene has been found. They could have left materials elsewhere, as well.

There is a site close to Park Street, where an emergency exit was once planned, which would have been an extension of Fordham Road. Seventy-five feet from Park Street a polluted area has been found, adjacent to Gowing Brook. The repair of an automobile could be the source, as could random dumping. Today there is a heavy growth of maple trees, etc. as at the place near Honeywell.

Easterly of the General Electric plant is the area that gets most attention. The paper last week showed the area clearly.

The Stickney well is northerly, just under 100 feet.

Questions can be asked about the area northerly and easterly of the Stickney well. No investigation seems to have been made there, according to the map.

There are about two dozen homes in North Reading, along Redmond Road, approximately 300 feet distant from the well. The area was looked over by this paper on one occasion, searching for possible clews as to the TCEs, etc. All observations were from the street, and nothing was seen which could indicate a source of any hydrocarbon.

But it could possibly be that this section, uphill from the well, is also a source of the problems of the Stickney well.

Gold on the RMS Republic?

The R M S (for Royal Mail Ship) Republic, sailing under the British flag, was sunk as the result of a collision with an Italian flag ship "Florida," south of Nantucket Island, sometime about 1909.

In the past few weeks there have been newspaper stories and TV stories about attempts to recover cargo, consisting possibly of gold, from that ship.

The RMS Republic, after having been sunk, was a famous ship because it was the first one ever to use wireless in calling for help after the collision.

Jack Binns was the radio operator who sent that signal. It was not S O S. That signal had not been thought of in 1909. Jack sent the signal C D Q.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Although I am a life-long resident of Massachusetts, I have never had need to call upon an elected official -until now. Having heard that some politicians are interested only in the "Big Guy" I was somewhat hesitant to approach my state representative with a problem.

Fortunately my area is represented by James R. Miceli. The courtesy extended to me by Jim Miceli and his staff was overwhelming. The detailed attention, fact-findings, and communication (phone calls made and returned when promised) between his office and myself certainly proved that everyone is a "Big Guy" in Jim Miceli's eyes.

We who live in the Tewksbury - Wilmington - Reading areas are truly fortunate to have in Jim Miceli a representative who cares and works for each one of us.

Sincerely,
Lee B. McPhail

Dear Larz,

For 16 1/2 years I have had the privilege of serving Tewksbury Hospital, 14 1/2 as assistant superintendent and two years as acting superintendent. I am proud that I have contributed to continuing the hospital's long tradition of caring and competent service for our patients.

It was my hope and ambition to succeed Tom Saunders as superintendent of the hospital. I must acknowledge my disappointment and regret that I will not have that additional privilege.

Tewksbury Hospital is unique among the public health institutions of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It is strongly based in the community it serves. Many dedicated hospital employees are first, second and third generation family members staffing the hospital. To all of them, to community leaders and private citizens, to many public officials across the Commonwealth and to my immediate family, I extend my heartfelt thanks for their help and support.

To them, I express the hope and belief that we can continue to assure the quality of care and service that is the hallmark of this major asset of the region it serves.

Until my retirement, I will work and continue our proud traditions. To my associates and fellow employees I pledge to assist and support our new superintendent in accomplishing our goals and objectives. I bid him welcome to a significant opportunity and challenge in meaningful health care. Let us join together to provide the cooperation he will need, and which our community must have.

This chapter is closed. I believe we should all look forward to a new chapter in devising and providing both traditional and innovative health services.

Rather than thank all of you who helped me by name and run the risk of omitting some: Let me just thank all of you once again.

Prohibition: The Volstead years in Wilmington

Copyright © 1987
by Capt. Larz Neilson

Herbert Hoover, president of the United States, inherited the problem of prohibition, as did his predecessor, Calvin Coolidge. Hoover termed the facts of prohibition "An experiment, noble in purpose."

His opponents, adherents of Franklin D. Roosevelt, twisted that phrase around to "A noble experiment."

Many of the men who were "policemen" in Wilmington during those years did not agree that the Volstead Act was a good thing. That act, noble in purpose as it may have been, brought about gangsterism in the cities of the United States, in addition to the illegal importation or manufacture of alcoholic beverages.

Walter A. Hill, Chief of Police, just wanted a nice quiet community. He had a police force of 10 to 15 men, scattered around the town, men who rarely served, but who could be called upon if the need arose.

Only one policeman was to be seen besides Chief Hill. Al Butters was daily to be seen in Wilmington Square. He lived just over the bridge, on the southeast side of Burlington Avenue. He stood around, most of the day, available to escort little old ladies across Main Street or to stop auto traffic when the evening trains arrived, so the passengers could cross Main Street on their way home.

Al had a heavy winter overcoat, which he constantly wore until about the 15th of May. When he took it off, the people of Wilmington could say that summer was about to arrive.

In addition to his police duties he was also chief of the fire department, a job which paid a couple of hundred dollars a year. The fire station was just at the foot of the hill on Church Street, about 200 yards away.

When a fire did occur Al would walk down to the station, exchange his policeman's cap for a fireman's cap, and ride off in the Model T firetruck which had been constructed by the volunteers.

Both Al and Chief Walter Hill realized that they lived in a town of less than 3,000 people, where everyone was neighbors.

If a family was to go down to the Grange Hall for a social, some evening, and the tail light would be out in the family flivver, neither Al nor Walter would stop that car. That's the way life was in Wilmington.

Harold D. Wilson lived in South Tewksbury, on Parker Street, at the corner of Lake Street, back about 1920. He worked for the then equivalent of the federal Internal Revenue Service. He was a nice fellow, well liked.

Then, sometime about 1922, when Congress passed the Volstead Act, to enforce the prohibition laws, Harold found he had, in effect, a new job.

It was up to him to enforce the law. Enforce the law he did.

Harold got his first state-wide publicity about 1923-24, when he led a raid on a Boston hotel, probably the Parker House. Specifically he raided a gala party, being given in honor of Governor Cox. He and his assistants carried away case after case of alcoholic beverages.

Harold became widely known as a result of that raid. He also had the honor of being in cartoons, in the Boston Post. One of those cartoons showed Governor Cox and others at the head table holding up their right hands and declaring "I saw no liquor."

It was about this time he moved into Wilmington. He lived on the west side of Church Street, in the house that was next to Wilmington common.

Harold became a frequent speaker in some of the churches of the state, churches which were in favor of the prohibition laws. In some churches he spoke more than once.

He also began to conduct raids in Wilmington and Tewksbury. He had a pretty good idea where the liquor was. He would get a court warrant, without saying anything to Chief Hill, and have a raid.

There were two newspapers in Lowell at that time. Both judged the locale of the raids by the telephone number of the person raided, as given in the telephone directory. Neither paper seemed to realize that all Tewksbury homes east of the Shawsheen River had Wilmington telephone numbers. It still is that way, today.

As a consequence they reported raids in Tewksbury as occurring in Wilmington. Some people were amused. Others were indignant.

Harold needed help, in his raids. He would call on the local police, who were by law obliged to assist, and this without telling the chief. Some police did not want to take part in raiding their fellow townsmen.

One person who did not want any part of such a business was Peter Neilson, a mason who lived on Glen Road, Wilmington, in a cement block house. He was called out once, for such a raid.

Peter was a man who always had a barrel or two of wine in the cellar, prepared by himself and Italian friends. He also, frequently, had a keg of beer, prepared by himself.

One evening Harold Wilson called him out, to help raid a house on Parker Street in Wilmington. Four or five other Wilmington police were in the party, most of them reluctantly.

Because they were sworn in to uphold the law they had to go.

Harold put Peter in back of the house being raided. His orders were to "watch the back door." Others were put on either side of the house, and then Harold and a friend "rushed" the front door.

A woman came out of the back door. As Peter watched she poured out a gallon of a clear liquid. Then she went and got some more. She poured gallons of what could be water onto the ground.

Harold Wilson went through the house and found nothing. He appeared at the back door. Had Peter Neilson seen anything?

Nothing was the answer, except a woman dumping some water.

Peter was never again asked to go on a raid.

Like other country towns Wilmington was becoming a haven for persons who wanted to do some bootlegging. Empty buildings were being bought for this purpose. It is impossible to remember many of the incidents which occurred.

There was a barn, on Chestnut Street, across from the old (1682) William Butter II house. It probably dated from about 1690.

Suddenly, one morning, that barn blew up. That barn had within it a 50,000-gallon still, the people of Wilmington learned.

Then there was an ancient Butters house on Butters Row, where Ted Butters, as a boy, lived. Ted was killed in the Civil War, at Gettysburg. One Sunday morning that house burned down. There had been a large still in it.

Way up on Andover Street, where the Sciarappa farm is today, there was a chicken house. Someone, with the ostensible idea of keeping the chickens warm put in a stove, complete with chimney.

The idea, as everyone learned later, was to hide the fact that there was a cellar, and in that cellar was a still. If smoke were to be seen coming out of the chimney, it could be explained by the need of keeping the chickens warm.

The mash was fed to the chickens. That was a handy way to get rid of the evidence.

Then, one day, two prohibition agents were driving south, on Andover Street. A drunken chicken staggered across the road.

That night there was a raid, in which no locals took part. Another still was out of business.

Further south on Andover Street two Boston men rented a home which is now the home of Ed Curtis, 156 Andover Street. They put in a still, quite an elaborate one.

Then, one morning, it blew up. Those two men did not linger around. They just walked down to the North Wilmington railroad station and took the train to Boston, never to be seen again.

That was in 1926, when the Browns Crossing station of the Wilmington Water Department was just getting started. Don Foster, the water superintendent, went up to that house to take apart what was left of the still. Don found a one cylinder, kerosine-driven Fairbanks engine. He took it down to the new pumping station, for possible emergency purposes. It is still there, 61 years later.

When the pumping station was flooded, in April of this year, and there was no electric power, that old Fairbanks engine provided compressed air, to help start the pumps.

Somewhere about that time an old farm, on Main Street, across from Eames Street was sold. The man who bought it had an idea he would make money, but the opposite proved to be the case. Call him Charlie.

Charlie was constantly asking others if they had ideas on how he could make some money, to help pay the mortgage. He went uptown, and the kindly Chief Hill put him on the police department.

There wasn't much to do, until one day Al Butters decided he needed a vacation. He was going to be gone for a month or so.

Charlie was assigned to be in Wilmington Square, to take over the job of Al Butters. Charlie made quite a job of the whole thing.

Wilmington residents learned, to their chagrin, that if they were to drive the family lizzie through Wilmington Square they could get a traffic ticket. They could get traffic tickets for other than no tail light. Charlie was being strict, in his treatment of fellow townsmen.

Luckily Charlie's temporary job lasted only for a month. Had it lasted much longer the Wilmington police department would probably have had trouble at the annual town meeting next spring. The voters had the ultimate power on how much money should be appropriated.

Charlie looked around for another job, as a cop. He noticed a small store, down near the Woburn line. To Charlie it seemed that liquor was being sold in that store.

That store faced on old Main Street, a roadway which can be still seen today behind the garage that is on the site of that store.

That road is a part of the ancient (c 1640) road that ran from Boston to Andover, called later The Andover Road. A man named Benjamin Harnden in 1705 ran over a drunken squaw one night, as he was returning home from Woburn. The death occurred beside a small pond, (Squaw Pond) which was filled in by the state in 1927. The store was just about on the site of that death, which was avenged a year after when the family of Benjamin's brother was killed in the Harnden Massacre.

The store on which Charlie's attention was fixed was being run by Jack Howard. He lived on Wildwood Street, opposite the cemetery, and near the present high school football field.

In that store Jack had a few items for sale, beans, rice, some canned goods. It looked like a store.

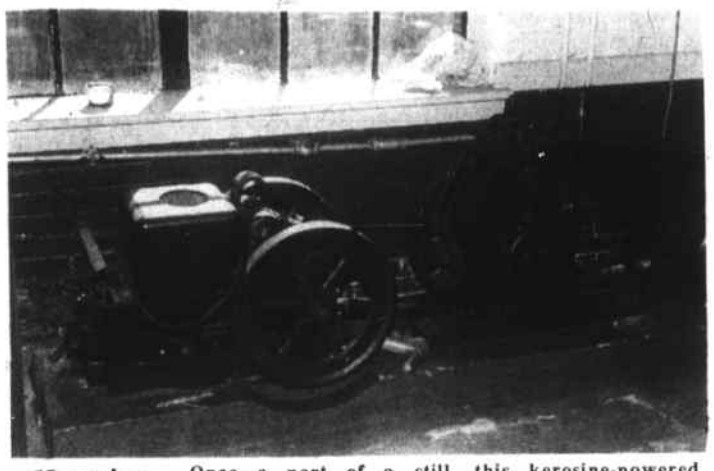

If a person was to go in, and if that person was known to Jack Howard, he could get a bottle of liquor. Jack would go out the back door and walk around the pond, which was about 50 feet long and half as wide. He would climb the hill, part of an ancient volcano, to (perhaps) the ruins of the building intended to be a Greek church.

Somewhere up there Jack Howard had a supply of liquor. He would return to the store and complete the sale.

Charlie decided that something should be done. Every morning he would put on his uniform and drive his flivver down to Jack Howard's store. He would park in front of the door, so that when the door was open he could see inside.

There Charles would sit, all day long, pretending to read the Boston Post. He didn't seem to accomplish much. No customers would go in to see Jack while Charlie was out in front.

It was a ridiculous situation. But Charlie put Jack Howard out of business, by sitting there, in his flivver. And he was paid his salary, as a cop, while he was doing it.

Kerosine engine Once a part of a still, this kerosine-powered "one-lunger" engine is kept at the Wilmington Water Department for emergency use. The still was located on Andover Street at the house now occupied by Ed Curtis.

Wilson home This home on Church Street wass occopied by Harold D. Wilson in the late 1920's.

Miceli vows no sludge plant

Representative James R. Miceli (D- Tewksbury, Wilmington) attended the preliminary hearing at the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) in Boston, Wednesday, July 29, 1987, to voice his strong opposition for a proposal of a composting and/or combustion of residuals site in Wilmington. The town is a member of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

The Representative voted to "fight this project every step of the way" to discourage MWRA from choosing Wilmington as a priority site as part of the project to clean up Boston Harbor.

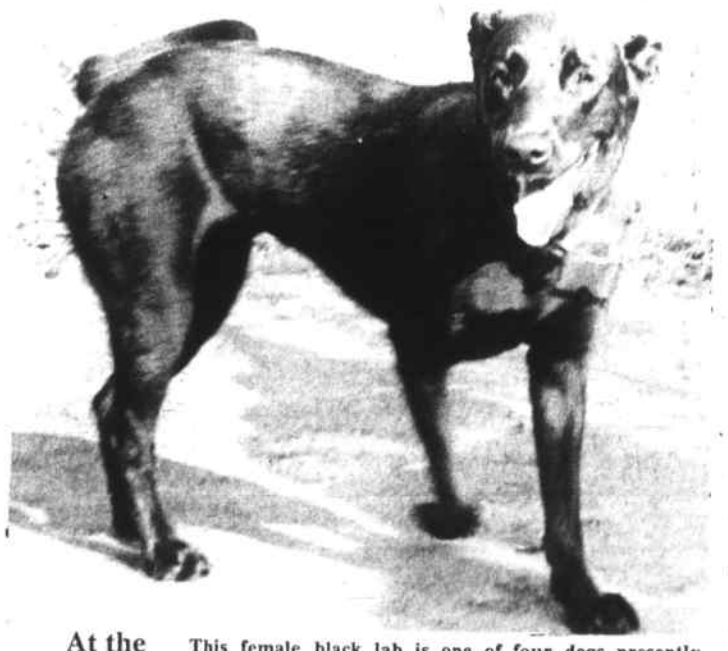

The Representative said "I am very optimistic that (a composting and/or combustion site) will never go there. I am confident, after my appearance at the hearing, that MWRA will not choose Wilmington as a priority site."

Twelve proposed sites were released Monday to area legislators. Representative Miceli immediately responded to MWRA and subsequently attended the hearing with the MWRA Board of Directors on July 29.

"This is a poor location for this kind of site," the Wilmington Democrat said. "The traffic on Ballardale Steet, Andover Street and Route 125 is heavy and congested. There are neighborhoods in that area that would also suffer."

A report released by MWRA stated that the Authority is under a federal court order to cease the dumping of sludge in Boston Harbor by 1991. MWRA is proposing sludge management faciities to be constructed to process increasing volumes of sludge. The sites considered are all members of the MWRA and the 12 sites proposed where chosen from a possible list of 300 locations.

A decision is expected from MWRA in mid 1988.

August social signups

Signups for the August therapeutic social which will be held at 12:30 p.m., Wednesday, August 26 at the Senior Citizen Center. A buffet luncheon including finger sandwiches, potato and tossed salads, hamburger and rolls, assorted pastry and coffee will be served. Music for the social will be supplied by Jim Blute. A $20.00 non-refundable deposit will be requested.

Arts and crafts donation

Thanks to the Arts and Crafts Committee for donating the deposit money from the July annual picnic which was used to purchase a camera for the Center. We will be using it to take pictures in black and white of all the services available to the residents of the town over the age of 60, i.e. activities, such as bingo, exercise, etc., and social services, meals on wheels, health clinics etc. We hope in the near future to put together a handout, containing the pictures with captions explaining the services. These handouts will be distributed throughout the town. As new programs are added, we will update it.

August whist

The first whist of August will be held in the function room of the Center on Monday, August 10 starting at 1 p.m. Prizes for the whist are donated to the seniors by the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs.

Fuel assistance

If you qualified for fuel assistance last year or feel you may qualify this year, call the Center and give your name and telephone number. Let us know if you are on SSI. Our telephone numer is 657-7595. SSI clients automatically qualify, therefore we will be making those applications out first.

The Federal Government wants the applications for the elderly started in September. Please don't wait until September to call us, especially if you are receiving an SSI check. When the applications arrive we will call those who have previously registered. Those SSI clients who have not pre-registered in August will have to wait until we make out all the seniors who have called.

Remember if you qualify for fuel assistance you also qualify for oil burner repair or oil burner replacement up to $2000. If your burner has to be repaired or replaced, make sure you tell us when you call, also, as those applications will have to be made out early.

Walking cup race

The Governor's annual senior citizen walking cup race will be held September 26. Any senior may enter the race. You do not have to be a professional. All that is necessary to enter is that you do walk at least a mile without getting tired. It has been a very enjoyable day in past years for those seniors who walked in the race. Tee-shirts are given to those who participate. If you would like to join the walkers, call the Center so that we can register you as a Wilmington senior citizen.

Airconditioning

Nod Mill dam

The Nod Mill dam, south of Salem Street in North Wimington, and southerly of Nod Pond, dates from 1695. The concrete pilings are relatively new, being constructed about 1955.

Upstream from the dam may be seen the Salem Street bridge, over Martin's Brook. The view is looking north.

Nod Mill dam holds back waters of Martin's Brook

by Capt. Larz Neilson

The Nod Dam, in North Wilmington has been discussed in recent weeks by the town administrator (manager) of North Reading and Wilmington's town manager.

The dam is one of two places where North Reading feels improvement can be made, for drainage of that town, as affected by Martin's Brook, the other being the site of the Salem Street bridge.

North Reading's problem is that Burroughs Road crosses Martin's Brook, just below Martin's Pond, and in effect, it does so in what is today termed a Flood Plain. It is that road which leads up toward the northwest corner of that town, and up toward Wilmington's Lost Colony.

The Lost Colony was a real estate development in the very early 1920s by a man named Fletcher, a man who lived in Quincy, Mass. Whether or not he had anything to do with the establishment of Burroughs Road across the flood plain area is not known.

Every year, during the spring months, the Wilmington Water Department floods that flood plain, operating on an ancient water right that dates back to 1695.

That water right was taken by eminent domain, along with 113 acres of land from the estate of Maria B. Hathaway. $14 thousand was paid for the land, and $4 thousand for water and flowage rights.

The water station known as Brown's Crossing depends on that dam, and that flood plain. When the dam is in operation the well field becomes "charged up" so that there is a good supply of water for the coming months. The Brown's Crossing well field is the most important of the well fields in the Wilmington water system.

The ancient water power dams in Massachusetts were of two types. One type was permanent, such as that at Ballardvale, where the mill pond existed all 12 months of the year. The other type is to be termed a farming dam, or spring dam. It could operate during the winter months, and up to April 15. After that no more water could be blocked, or dammed.

The purpose of this regulation, or law, was to allow farmers who had fields or farms upstream from the dam to get their spring crops planted. In other words, the person who did own the dam did not own the fields above it, after April 15, each year.

Nod Mill operated for over 200 years. It was on the west bank of Martins Brook, just below Salem Street.

Asa Sheldon tells of the mill, which he owned, in his autobiography, and how he cut lumber there. During the Civil War "flannel boards" were cut, for the purpose of wrapping up flannel being produced in the mills of Ballardvale, for the Union Army.

Cutting lumber, in a mill like Nod Mill, was a slow process. The old saw is still in existence, now the property of Wilmington's Ed Sargent. A similar saw is to be seen at Sturbridge Village, in Western Massachusetts.

The saying is that the saw "went up today, and down tomorrow."

Some years after the Wilmington Water Department established the Brown's Crossing water station a man named Flint, in North Reading sued the town, claiming he was illegally flooded. Mr. Flint, a member of an old North Reading family, lived on North Street, it is believed, near Salem Street.

The late Town Counsel Philip Buzzell of Wilmington won the case, in court about 1939. He showed a continuous use of the dam, since 1695, and further that the Colonial statutes of Massachusetts allowed the dam to be in operation every year, until the middle of April. The date, he showed was, it is to be believed, April 15, but that is not 100 percent certain.

Going to bat for bats

by Larz F. Neilson

If you were to rate animals for popularity, where would you place bats? Unfortunately, it seems the greatest problem with bats is their image. Too many people hate them.

What is most ironic about this is that bats are harmless creatures that eat bugs. And while they may not be the most attractive creatures to have around the house, there are ways to deal with them without killing them.

Your editor revealed in last week's paper that he has bats in his house. The first thought was to call an exterminator. But then he saw an article about a group called Bat Conservation International (BCI).

A fat envelope arrived in Monday afternoon's mail from BCI, with information about a bat house which can be built or bought. The group has several publications, including a brochure called "Why Save Bats." Other materials include "Bats and Public Health," "The Importance of Bats," Dealing with Unwanted Guests," and "the Most Famous Bat in the World."

A ten-page pamphlet, "Hazards of House Bat Mismanagement," deals not with any dangers posed by bats themselves (which are minimal), but with the dangers of using pesticides in bat nuisance situations.

There are also slide programs, one entitled "Bats, Myth and Reality," the other "Saving America's Bats."

Besides the bat house, the group also has a bat detector, plus t-shirts and posters.

BCI operates out of the University of Texas at Austin. Dr. Merlin Tuttle founded BCI because traditional conservation organizations considered bats too hopelessly unpopular to be helped.

The group operates in several areas, conducting research, providing information and education, seeking protective legislation, and marketing the bat house.

The bat house is designed to be mounted on a wall or tree about 15 feet off the ground, facing south or east. Dr. Paul Robertson said that there is no guarantee that bats will inhabit it, but it is worth a try. They are trying to learn why bats will or will not inhabit a bat house. Bats, he said, are very specific about desires of where they want to live.

Bats are not rodents. According to the BCI brochure, they are more closely related to humans than to mice. They belong to the order Chiroptera, meaning hand-wing.

There are more than 950 species of bats, with 39 found in the United States. There are nine species in Massachusetts.

They seldom have rabies. Dr. Robertson said that fewer than one-half of one percent of all bats have rabies. In the past 40 years, there have been only eight deaths from rabid bat bites in all the U.S. and Canada.

The logo of Bat Conservation International is an ancient Chinese design incorporating five bats.

Bats are probably best-known for their appetite for insects. Depending on the species and locale, a single bat may eat hundreds or thousands of insects in a single night.

Less-known is the role of the bat as a pollinator of flowers, thus contributing to the food chain. Among the plants visited by bats are bananas, avocados, cashews, dates, figs, mangos, and peaches.

In some areas, bats are hunted for human consumption.

All right, you say. All you want to know is how to get them out of the eaves of your house.

Dr. Robertson said the best way is with aviary netting, such as is used for protecting berry bushes from birds. The netting should be set up to make a veil across the opening where the bats enter, leaving the bottom loose so they can fall out. The netting forms a one-way valve, sort of like a reverse lobster trap. Since bats must fly directly into the nest opening, the net will block their path.

The bat net should be left in place for three or four days, Dr. Robertson said. After that, the entrance used by the bats should be sealed.

A bat net kit may is sold by Wildlife Control Technology, 6408 South Fig, Fresno, CA 93706.

While you have your address book out, you can write to Bat Conservation International at P. O. Box 162603, Austin, TX 78716.

Sinking mines in World War II

Copyright © 1987
by Capt. Larz Neilson

During the past few days there have been reports, on tv., of mines in the Persian Gulf. Scenes have shown U.S. Navy personnel armed with rifles, in the bows of ships, looking for the mines and, presumably, prepared to shoot.

The publisher of this paper had somewhat similar experiences with Japanese mines, after the end of World War II.

The 'Chanute Victory,' a troop ship, sank several floating mines in the mid-Pacific, in early February, 1946. These mines had been released by the Japanese with the expectation they would float across the Pacific and come in contact with Americasn ships, thereby sinking them.

The ship had surface-search radar, which was constantly operating, during the voyage from Yokohama to Portland,Oregon.The first floating mine was discovered the fourth morning out, at about 6 a.m.

The ship was made to circle the mine, at a distance of about 200 yards, while seamen gunners manned the 20 mm Oerliken guns (machine guns). The gunners were ordered to fire directly down, and then "walk" the bullets out to the mine. This was done, and the mine sank into the sea.

To the 1600 U.S. soldiers who were passengers on the ship, it was something to wake up in the morning like that, and hear gunfire. It took them less than two minutes to get dressed and get to the main deck. But by that time the mine had disappeared beneath the waves.

New area code 508

Beginning August 1, all business and residential customers throughout the 617 area code region will be receiving information with their phone bills about Massachusetts' new area code - 508.

New England Telephone will introduce the new area code on July 16, 1988. Greater Boston will retain the 617 area code while areas north, west and south will be served by the new 508 code. The 413 area code region will be unaffected.

The information package customers are receiving with their bills marks the beginning of an extensive informational campaign about 508. The package will contain a map of the new area code boundary as well as a list of the cities and towns that will be served by the new 617 and 508 regions.

Finally, the package will answer frequently-asked questions about the new area code.

In order to give customers ample time to prepare for the change, New England Telephone made the initial announcement about the new area code more than a year ago. Some business customers, for example, will need to change printed matter that contains a telephone number, adding the new area code.

Others will have to inform frequent callers to their homes that their dialing procedures will need to be changed.

The new area code is being introduced in Eastern Massachusetts because New England Telephone is running out of telephone numbers in the region. Having a second area code in this region will give the company more telephone numbers to assign to customers.

Once the new area code is implemented, customers calling into the new 508 region will have to dial "1," the new area code and the seven digit telephone number.

David Ravanesi, NET Public Relations manager, stressed that the introduction of 508 will not create a new toll-calling boundary. Telephone calls that are not toll calls today will not be toll calls in the future, even if a customer has to dial "1" and the new are code to cross the new are code boundary.

Over the past few years, there have been several new area codes introduced in the United States--including New York City, San Diego, Los Angeles and Houston.

Heart disease risk factor assessments offered at RHCW

Many of the factors which are known to play a role in the development of cardiovascular disease are controllable. That is, we can make changes in our daily lives that can reduce the risk of developing cardiovascular disease. What we need to do, however, is determine what our current level of risk is, so that we can take steps toward minimizing our chances for developing these diseases.

A cardiovascular risk assessment helps you to learn your risk for heart disease and includes a blood test profile for cholesterol, HDL (high density lipo-protiens which help eliminate cholesterol), glucose and triglycerides.

To take the first step in lowering your risk, please call 657-3910, ext. 567 to schedule an appointment for the blood test which will be held Wednesday, August 19 from 8 to 10 a.m. Counseling sessions will be held the following Thursday, August 27, from 2 to 7 p.m. A scheduled appointment is necessary.

The Regional Health Center in Wilmington is a division of Choate-Symmes Health Services.

You're out !

Wilmington All-Star thirdbaseman Nicole Quellette has just finished applying the tag as the umpire makes the emphatic call during the recent District 13 Tournament loss to Woburn.

Tourney of Champions

A's top Woburn, 4-1

In the opening game of the Tournament of Champions for the District 13 Little League, the Wilmington A's defeated the Woburn Indian's, 4-1 behind the complete game pitching of Joey Catanzano.

The A's took a 3-0 lead in the first inning and held on the rest of the way in a well played game. Tommy Sheehan provided the A's with all the runs they would need with a long double to centerfield in the first inning, driving in two runners.

Other key hits for the A's were provided by Todd Richard, Stephen Burns, Joey Catazano and Tommy Zaya.

Stephen Burns, Danny Ballou, David Godin and Tommy Zaya played well defensively for the A's. Joey Catanzano, in going the distance for the A's, allowed only five hits while striking out four and walking only two batters.

The Tournament of Champions is sponsored by the Little League and runs for five games and includes the top Little League teams in the district, including teams from Woburn, Arlington, Stoneham, Wilmington, Maynard and North Reading.

The two top teams from Wilmington, the A's and Tigers, finished in a tie for first in regular season play, are entered in this year's tournament.

The Tigers' next game at Rotary Park will be Thursday night, August 6.

The Tigers lost a heartbreaker to the Woburn Red Sox, 4-3 in their opening game at Woburn. Jason Early pitched a magnificient game for the Tigers, going the distance.

David Fleming and Jimmy McHugh had key hits for the Tigers, while John O'Reilly was a standout defensively behind the plate.

Letter to the sports editor

More Tewksbury sports

Dear Rick:

We have been subscribers of the Town Crier for a few years now. Your paper is enjoyed by my entire family. We would appreciate it if your paper would give more coverage to Tewksbury sports. We have children in Tewksbury hockey, basketball and baseball.

On July 13, the Brewers defeated the Pirates,11-2 to win the town title for the Minor Leagues.

One of the columns that my family looks forward to is Woodchips. My children enjoy the jokes and I enjoy the stories.

Thank you,
Joseph Foley

Sports editor replies: This is a first for me. Usually the complaint is that there is too much Tewksbury sports in this section. Generally, the coverage for each town flows with the level of cooperation I receive from area coaches, since I am basically a staff of one person. I have stated this on several occasions. This summer the Wilmington Little League coaches have given me statistics, schedules and several phone calls, so because of this, their coverage has probably been somewhat better.

Final game

It was a tough way to finally lose, but Tewksbury's District 14 Senior League champs fell to Swampscott last week, 14-1. Clockwise, leftfielder Mark Conway dives and misses a Swampscott homer; pitcher Jim Rogers fires a fastball; and secondbaseman Bob Carney scrambles for a slowly hit groundball.

Outdoors column

by Bill Conlon

When it comes time to teach the young'uns about fishing, there are two species of local fish which will more often than not provide the hands-on part of the training.

The first fish is the horned pout, which I'll deal with next week. Horned pout fishing is limited to novices anyway, or at least those old enough to fish after dark.

No, the first fish which we all catch is -- what else? -- the sunfish, better known to Yankees everywhere as the "kibbie."

Come on now, admit it -- the first fish you ever caught was a kibbie, or perhaps you went the big league route and hooked a bluegill. The difference isn't much when you're five years old and holding a rod for the first time.

(Anyone who claims that the first fish they ever caught was a salmon, or some other high-falutin' species, is either a dangerous pathological liar, doomed to a life of writing outdoors columns, or else filthy rich. Both types can grow up to become normal fishermen, but it's much more fun to make friends with the latter.)

Kibbies, as we all admit, are the easiest of all fish on Earth to catch. They'll snap at anything in the water, from marshmallows to bare hooks. (Yup.)

The reason is simple -- kibbies eat anything that moves. Bugs make up the bulk of their diet, and the little panfish are especially fun to chase with a fly rod. Also, since kibbies live exclusively in shallow water, they often fall prey to youngsters who haven't yet graduated to fancy bass boats and other outrageously expensive toys.

What may be of interest to older kids, however, is the sheer number of different species that fall under the general heading of "kibbies." The most popular species, and the easiest to identify is the bluegill, which by all rights is in a class by itself. In Southern states, bluegill are known as bream (pronounced "brim") and even grownups love to catch and eat them.

Bluegills may grow to a pound or bigger, and that would be one tough little fish. Any bluegill bigger than your hand, in fact, will put up one hellacious fight on light tackle.

Other species that we lump together as "just kibbies" include redear and pumpkinseed, to name a few, but there are about eight different species. It takes a trained eye to tell one species of kibbie from another, but who cares when it's your very own first, live fish?

Another surprising fact about America's favorite little fish is how they taste. The absolute best fish dinner I ever sat down to consisted of little sunfish fillets fried in butter and crumbs. The fillets are small, and the meat is white and delicate, but a half dozen kibbies will fill a plate nicely.

But eating a kibbie is something most folks never experience. The highest calling of any kibbie, hands down, is that of training whole new generations in the timeless art of catching fish.

At this very moment, at ponds around the world, a thousand proud Daddys are smiling down at their happy youngsters, as each of the kids holds up a struggling, shining sunfish on a string for the first time.

From all of us who took up the lifelong pleasure of fishing thanks to that first kibbie:

Thank you! Live long.

Hats off to the Tophet Fish and Game Club of Westminster both for their approach to litter and to the jerks who leave it.

It seems that some cretins were dumping trash on private land that local sportsmen are allowed to use, and the club members got mad. The club is now offering a $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone who dumps trash on land open to hunting in Hubbardston, Barre or Westminster, Mass. Nicely done!

The Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club is holding its Annual Outing on Spetember 13, 1-6 p.m. The event will feature a chicken barbeque, pig roast, cake sale and flea market, and tickets are $7 each. To reserve a table, call 667-7789 or 851-9208.

Another Tewksbury R&G event coming up is an all-day deep sea fishing trip, set for August 29. The Yankee Fleet boat will leaving the Gloucester dock at 6 a.m., but the nearby restaurant opens at 5 for the breakfast crowd. Contact club members for tickets, which are going fast. See you there.

Tennis tourney

Andover High School will be the site of the Sixth Annual Samaritan Tennis Tourney. Through the courtesy of the Andover Department of Community Services, courts have been reserved for the tourney starting Friday, August 28 and winding up Sunday, the 30th.

The tournament, which is open to the general public, will benefit the Samaritans of the Merrimack Valley, the 24 hour suicide prevention and befriending service for the Merrimack Valley and Southern New Hampshire.

There will be two divisions for both men and women singles, arranged by playing level, advanced (A) and intermediate (B). There will also be mens', women and a mixed doubles category with a limit of one singles and one doubles event only.

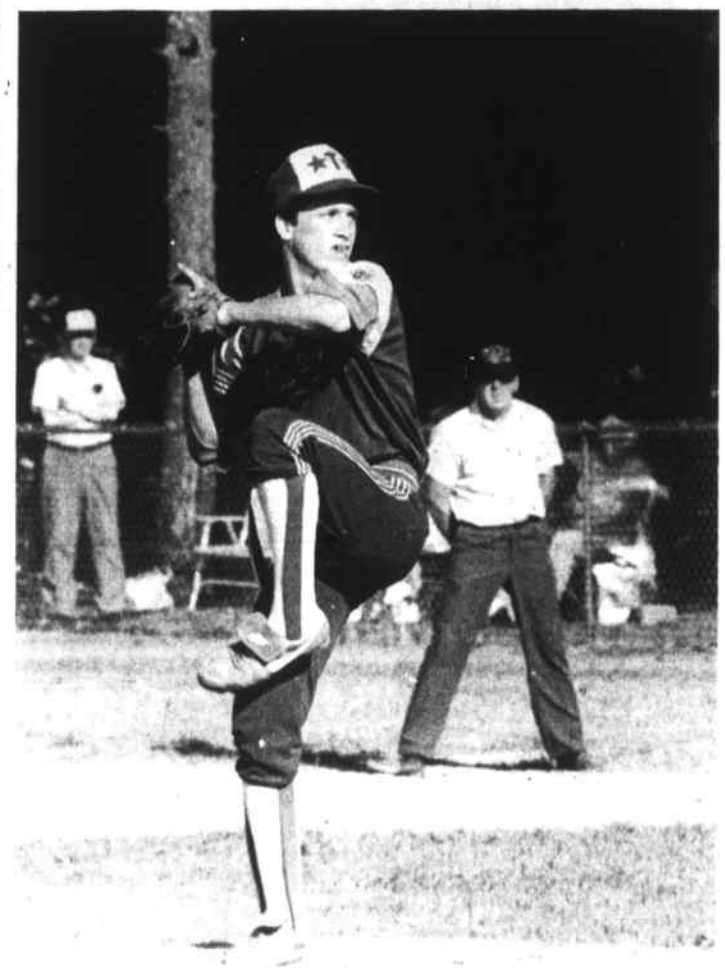

The tax deductible entry fee is $17 for singles and $20 for a doubles team. If playing both events, the total fee is $25 per entrant.

Entry forms are available at most local sporting goods stores, tennis clubs or from the Samaritans, 55 Jackson St., Lawrence.

For further information, call the Samaritans at 688-6607 or Tournament Director, Joe Ruggieri at 686-5013.

Proceeds from the tournament will help continue the work of the Samaritans who respond to over 3000 calls for help every month.

Tewksbury stars

Eight Keys

M.L. Carr, former Boston Celtic star recently shared some pizza and his book "Eight Keys to a Better Me," with elementary school students at a local Papa Gino's restaurant.

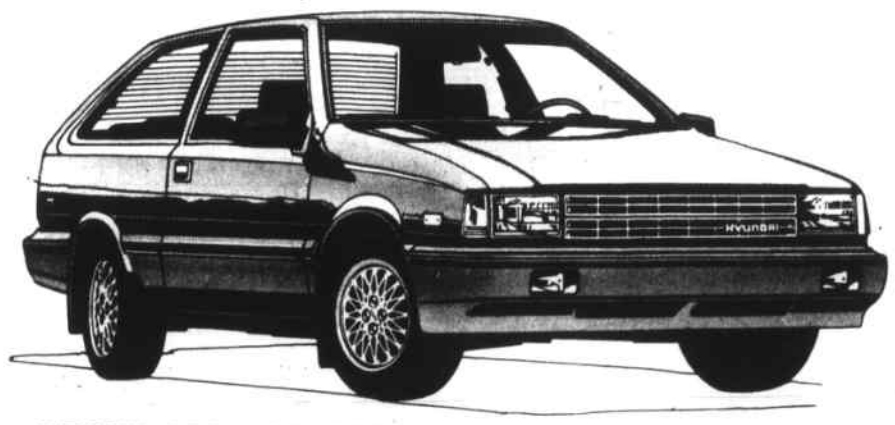

"Eight Keys," organized by Carr, is a state-wide, character-building program involving elementary school students and their parents and teachers. The program will be one of the major beneficiaries of "Papa Gino's Children's Appeal," running now through the end of August.

Through the sale of coupon books, the campaign aims to raise more than one-quarter of a million dollars to distribute to charities that help local underprivileged and needy children. The coupon books are available at Papa Gino's restaurants for $1.50 and they are redeemable throughout the year for more than $21.00 worth of discounts at Papa Gino's.

Paddlewheelers relived on Merrimack River

The wheelhouse of the Merrimack Queen, with the radar antenna visible at the top, sports a mural commemorating Mark Twain and his love of riverboats.

by Bill Conlon

The heyday of the paddlewheel riverboat is past, and the nation bemoans the loss. Those majestic queens of the river, which once filled the Mississippi with music and laughter, have all but disappeared from the scene.

Today, only a few remnants are left of the once bustling riverboat trade. Paddlewheelers in the age are few, all of them on the Mississippi, where folks come to remember the glory of days past.

But not anymore.

Just a few minutes north of Boston is one of the newest and most active paddlewheelers in the world today. The river is the Merrimack, and the paddlewheels are driven by diesels instead of steam, but little else has changed since Mark Twain wrote his classic tales about life on the river.

The "Merrimack Queen" is the pride and joy of Captain William "Red" Slavit, a living legend who resides in Haverhill, Mass.

Cap'n Red is credited with saving more than 160 lives in his long career at sea, and the TV program Evening Magazine once reveiwed more than 38,000 applicants before naming Cap'n Red as the most "Extraordinary Person" in all of New England in 1982.

The accomplishments of Cap'n Red go far beyond lifesaving, however, though he keeps hand in by serving as Harbormaster in Haverhill.

As just one example of his busy life, there was at point in history only three people in the world who could fly helicopters -- the inventor of the helicopter Igor Sikorsky, an officer of the Coast Guard, and Red Slavit. One of Red's many trophies is a signed picture of Igor Sikorsky, with a note thanking Red for his able assistance.

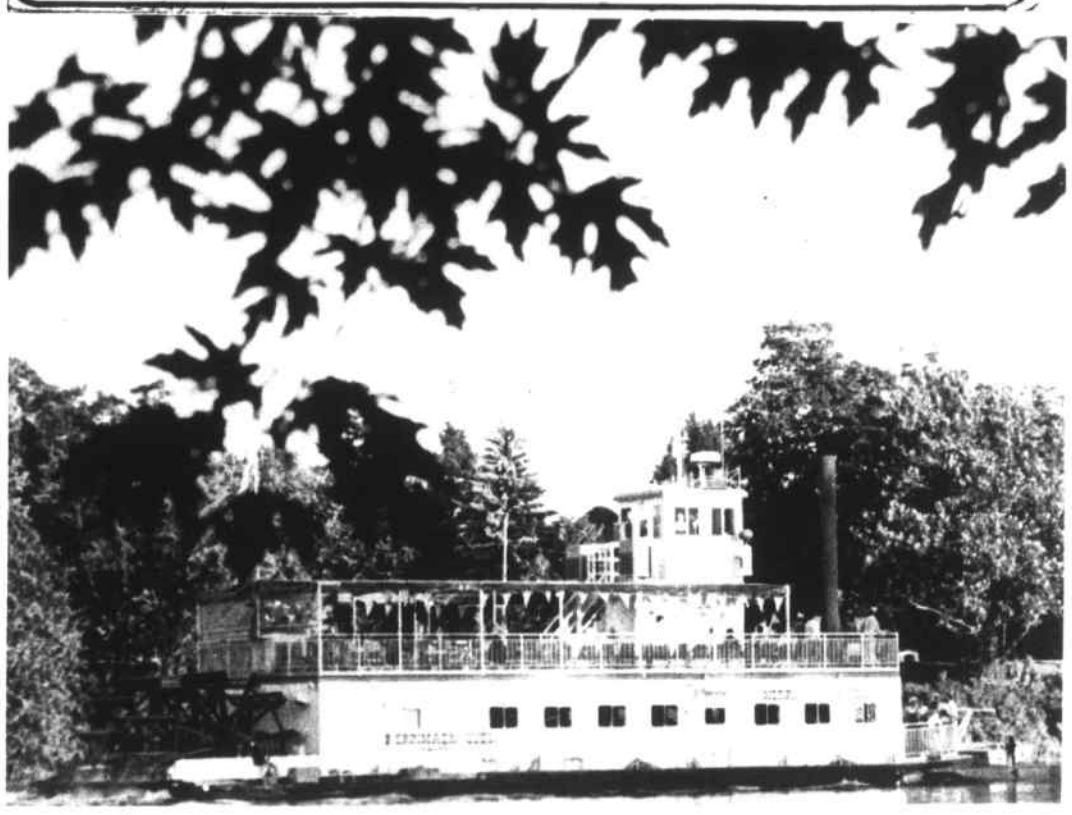

His biography will someday make for excellent reading but right now Cap'n Red, at age 65, is far too busy running a riverboat to even think about his retirement.

The paddlewheeled "Merrimack Queen," his third excursion boat after the "Viking" and the "Mt. Vernon Belle," was purchased in 1985 from the Red Fox shipyard in New Iberia, Louisiana, at a cost of $1.5 million.

"I figured out I'll have it paid off when I'm 140 years old," Red said with a laugh. "That means I'm going to live forever."

The reason for buying a paddlewheeler, according to Cap'n Red, is the shallow draft of the ship.

"At low tide there's only four feet of water in some places on the Merrimack," the Captain said, "and this is the only boat that can make the trip." The Queen's hull rides only 38 inches down, and the paddles dip in a mere 18 inches.

The slow and stately Merrimack Queen, operating out of Haverhill, Mass., takes up to 150 passengers at a time on scenic excursions along the Merrimack River. The stern paddlewheel riverboat is the only one of its kind known in New England.

The new paddlewheeler was loaded onto a barge in Louisiana, the captain said, and pushed by tugboat all the way to Portsmouth, N.H., a voyage of 43 days. Once in Portsmouth, a pair of cranes lifted the 100 foot ship out of the barge and placed her on the water, where she was on her own.

An all-day ocean trip brought the Queen to Haverhill, where she now takes up to 150 passengers at a time on river excursions.

The normal cruising route for the Queen is upriver to the center of Haverhill, or downriver to Newburyport and back. Cruises take from two to three hours.

While the Merrimack River has a long history of industry and commerce, the trip is more peaceful than one might imagine. The riverbanks are lush and green, with waterfowl and shorebirds everywhere, and the water is always smooth. The deck of the riverboat never pitches or rocks.

At a top speed of ten knots, it's a soothing ride on a quiet river. The hum of the diesels is just a whisper in the background, and only a blast from the horns can break the stillness and calm of the river.

Some of the riverboat charters are far from quiet, however, and deliberately so. The Merrimack Queen is frequently chartered for private parties, from company gatherings to wedding receptions, and ship has even carried rock bands on occasion. The steadiness of the ship makes the upper deck's dance floor a welcome feature.

The best music of all, however, is provided by the New City Jazz Band, one of the frequent guest bands on board. When the jazz band strikes up on the fantail, the feel of the ship suddenly changes. In a blink, it's like the 1800s again.

Captain Red's unique riverboat may be reached by taking I-495 northbound to Route 113. Follow Route 113 through Haverhill, past the hospital and stadium, and take a sharp left before the drawbridge which marks the Groveland town line. Charters and reservations may be made by calling 372-3420.

Public excursions take place on Fridays from 2-4 p.m. at $8 each and on Sundays 12:30 to 3 p.m. at $10 each. Youngsters make the trip for half price. Bands are not a part of the public excursions.

The Merrimack Queen is the only paddlewheeled riverboat north of Florida, and is perhaps the best-kept secret in New England. The Queen harkens back to an earlier age, before cars or television, when a cruise on a paddlewheeled steamboat was the most exciting thing in the world.

And when the paddles splash and the banjo begins to play, the magic of the river takes over. For the next few hours, you get to live in another century, and see the world as Mark Twain would.

It's magic.

Trivia

Is the U.S. too waste-ful? Within a decade, half the states will face serious problems in trying to dispose of their garbage. Although the problem is worse in urban areas, large, sparsely populated states also are running out of landfill space and cannot easily obtain new sites. According to National Wildlife magazine, long-term solutions, such as incineration and facilities to convert trash to energy, are needed.

Donate own blood at Choate-Symmes

"Many of my relatives and friends were surprised to learn such a program exists," says Area Sidebotham of Lexington.

"I was so grateful," Mrs. Sidebotham added, "that Choate-Symmes offers the Autologous Donor program. I benefited from it in June when I had knee surgery performed at Symmes."

"Under the program, patients scheduled for surgery at Choate or Symmes Hospital may donate their own blood which will be stored for surgery," says Doris DeGraves, MA, MT (ASCP), administrative director of Choate-Symmes Laboratory Services.

"When a blood transfusion is necessary, the safest blood to receive is one's own, because it is completely compatible with one's own body. Any apprehensions the patient may have about receiving a blood transfusion are alleviated," the director added.

Because Autologous blood (derived from the same individual) is free of any risk of transmitting an illness and will not cause allergic reactions, it is ideal for those scheduling elective surgery, patients with rare blood types or members of certain religious groups.

Apparently, this sense of security has increasingly motivated patients to participate in the program. In its first year, 25 individuals signed up. However, in the first five months of this year, 33 have already subscribed, an indication the figure may more than double by year's end.

DeGraves said the Blood Bank, a department of Choate-Symmes Laboratory Services, is responding to an expressed need in the community. "We are providing a service which has been requested by local physicians and residents alike."

After surgery is scheduled, a patient can "pre-deposit" up to four pints of blood. DeGraves said that Choate-Symmes has the capability to store the bood for a maximum of 42 days. If it turns out that the patient does not need all of the reserved blood, the Blood Bank may use it for other patients.

Patients in the Autologous Donor program must meet certain criteria established by the Choate-Symmes Blood Bank and must have the approval of their physician.

Registered technologists from the Blood Bank, which is certified by the American Association of Blood Banks, draw and type the blood, perform an antibody screen, and test it for AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), and syphilis.

The program is covered by medical insurance. More information can be obtained by calling the Blood Bank, 933-6700, ext. 4278 or the Symmes Blood Bank, 646-1500, ext. 1125.

A TECHNOLOGIST prepares to draw blood from Choate-Symmes patient Area Sidebotham, who recently participated in the hospitals' Autologous Donor program.

Gov. Dukakis signs Used Car Lemon Law

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis recently signed the Used Car Lemon Law which requires dealers to provide specific written warranties for most used cars and establishes a state-run arbitration program to resolve dealer/buyer disputes.

The law, which will take effect on July 1, 1988, closes a gap in Massachusetts consumer protection by affording used car buyers explicit remedies similar to those provided under the state's successful New Car Lemon Law which, so far, has resulted in nearly $2 million in refunds to consumers.

"The days are over when anyone in this state can irresponsibly and unfairly unload a lemon on an unsuspecting young person or struggling family. Used car buyers, often those least able to afford the expense of extensive car repairs, let alone court action, will now have protection under the law," Dukakis said.

Secretary of Consumer Affair and Business Regulation Paula W. Gold, whose office administers the New Car Lemon Law Arbitration Program and will administer the new Used Car Lemon Law, called the bill "a vital consumer protection tool which will help us ensure that all Massachusetts car buyers are treated fairly."

The Massachusetts New Car Lemon Law, which has included mandatory arbitration since April 1986, has been a model for other states. Thus far, the Massachusetts program has resulted in over $1.75 million in refunds to consumers. There has also been a marked improvement in the attitudes of manufacturers who now generally cooperate fully with the spirit of the law.

Building on the lessons of the New Car Lemon Law, the Used Car Law will require:

Written warranties, provided by dealers and issued to cars costing $700 or more with less than 125,000 miles in total mileage, will cover the full cost of parts and labor and repair any defects impairing the use or safety of the vehicle. Warranties will vary in duration according to the vehicle's mileage.

A refund will be issued if the dealer fails to repair a defect that impairs the use or safety of the vehicle after three repair attempts or eleven business days in the repair shops.

Mandatory arbitration may be sought if the dealer fails to make a refund which the consumer believes is warranted.

Failure by a private seller to disclose any known defect impairing the vehicle's use or safety entitles the private party buyer to cancel the sale within 30 days.

To allow time for proper implementation, including promulgation of regulations, establishment of the arbitration program, and production of consumer education materials, the law will not become effective until July 1, 1988.

Cool room guards against heat stroke

The Executive Office of Elder Affairs reminds elders that remaining in a cooled room is one of the best precautions to heat stroke exhaustion.

As we age, our bodies are less able to respond to long exposure to heat or cold. Individuals with heart and circulatory disease, stroke, or diabetes are especially susceptible to heat-related illnesses.

The heat of the summer doesn't have to melt away resources, however. according to the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, "There are simple steps that seniors can follow for summer energy savings. Elders who have a window or central air conditioner can save dollars." Recommendations include:

Select an air conditioner with the lowest suitable capacity and highest efficiency.

Set controls at the lowest comfortable setting with the fan on high.

Clean and replace filters regularly.

Turn off the air conditioner if you will be out for more than several hours.

Block out the sun during the day, and open windows at night if the night air is cool and comfortable.

Insulate air conditioning ducts, and install an attic ventilation fan if you do not have one.

Close the doors to adjacent unused rooms. Do not cool them if they are not in use.

Keep the air conditioning away from heat sources such as lamps, and out of direct sunlight.

For more information, elders may call the EOEA Hotline: 1-800-882-2003, or the local utility company.

There is no single cat called a panther. The name is commonly applied to the leopard, puma, and the jaguar.

If you're feeling the summer heat...

WOMEN'S AGLOW

Do you feel that you were born into the wrong family?

Do you blame your parents and others for your problems, for your behavior, for your attitudes?

Is there hope for a person reared in an environmental setting conducive to alcohol, gambling, loose sexual standards and racial prejudices?

If you can identify with any or all of the above, you will enjoy meeting Mabel Richardson. Mabel has experienced all of the above situations. Salem Women's Aglow invites you to an inspirational evening with Mabel. She will share her story of how the Lord has changed her into a new creation.

Mabel has experienced much in her life, was one of fifteen children who overcame obstacles. Mabel is happily married to Darryl, an airman stationed at Hanscom Air Force Base in Bedford. Darryl is an accomplished song writer/singer who will be ministering in song.

Join Women's Aglow on Thursday, August 13 at 7:30 p.m. for an interesting evening at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 94 Washington Square, Salem. Bring a friend.

CAR COLLECTOR AUCTION

Returning for the 11th year, the Greater Boston Collector Car Auction will be held September 12 at the Topsfield Fairgrounds, Route 1, Topsfield. A flea market and a car show run September 12 and 13 respectively.

Auctioneers of Kruse International, based in Auburn, Ind., have set a 250-car goal for the sale. The local sponsor is North Shore Old Car Club, and local coordinators are Everett and Joan Hudson of Ipswich, and Bob DeSantis.

Last year's event saw 4,000 people enter through the gates and Joan Hudson said she expects this year to be even bigger.

More than 200 classic, antique, muscle and special interest cars will be featured for the auction. Cars will begin rolling in Sept.11 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sept. 12 from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. for check-in.

Cars will be displayed on the fairgrounds throughout the weekend for spectators to examine. The auction will be conducted under a large tent and cars will run through one at a time.

Early entries include a 1931 Chevrolet rumbleseat coupe, a 1966 Mustang, a fully restored 1956 Ford T-Bird and a 1929 Model A rumbleseat roadster.

Vendors for the flea market come from Canada through Virginia to display tables of automobile and miscellaneous parts. Judging for the car show will be on Sunday.

Auction enthusiasts should ask for special Kruse rates at Inn at the Pike (Best western), 50 Dayton St., Danvers.

Kruse International, the world's largest classic car auction company, conducts more than 40 sales a year, auctioning over 10,000 cars valued at $150 million.

Admission to the auction is $4 and a bidder's card costs $30, which includes two admission tickets and reserved seats. Tickets for the flea market and car show are $1.50 and children under 12 will be admitted free. Automobile entry fee is $5 for the car show.

Eastern Middlesex Council for Children annual election

The Eastern Middlesex Council for Children is pleased to announce that elections to its Board of Directors will take place in mid-September.

This is a key opportunity for any one from Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham or Wakefield who has a special interest in children's needs, services, programs, and issues.

The Board is seeking membership from local residents, parents, community leaders, adolescents, educators, human service professionals: citizens who have an interest in speaking out on children's issues.

It is the responsibility of the Board to represent local concerns and make decisions affecting the lives of children, based on thorough research, analysis, and awareness.

No other Board is authorized by law to critique and challenge the way children in the Eastern Middlesex area are serviced; no other Board is mandated by the State to act as the local child advocate.

Children need responsible and caring adults to represent their interests. A call to Marie Casside, Community Representative at 245-5267, will provide you with further information on Council for Children Board membership. Your skills and experience, in any form, can make a vital difference for the better.

The Lost Boys Starring Corey Feldman, Corey Hiam, Jason Patric, Kiefer Sutherland. Directed by Joel Schumacher. Produced by Harvey Bernhard. Screenplay by Janice Fischer, James Jeremias, Jeffrey Boam. Rated R (profanity, violence).

The Lost Boys are sharp-toothed, seaside blood brothers who dress in leather and earrings, drive motorcycles and are the only gang on the boardwalk who can stand up to the surf nazis. These vampiric dead heads can overpower almost anyone, and do a nifty job of terrorizing the unsuspecting inhabitants of Santa Carla. But only until two melodramatic purveyors of comic books team up with the new kid in town.

The new kid, played by Corey Hiam (Lucas) doesn't believe the Frog brothers and their creepy warnings about blood-sucking creatures of the night until his brother Michael floats past the bedroom window, the latest member of the gruesome gang. The three of them decide to de-vamp the town, and the results are far more funny than frightening.

The movie would have been better, even scarier, if J.M. Barrie's theme about a band of motherless boys had been given more time. These boys offer a darker version of eternal life than anything found in Peter Pan and the evil seduction of everlasting youth coupled with fresh blood could have been milked for a few goosebumps. As it stands, however, this is slick, first-rate entertainment.

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

The Lost Boys
Tampopo
Summmer School

Tampopo Starring Tsutomu Yamazaki, Nobuko Miyamoto, Koji Yakusho. Written and directed by Juzo Itami. Unrated, but some brief nude scenes.

Loving, sloppy, murturing, titillating and exuberant, Tampopo is a Japanese "noodle" western that is a joyous reaffirmation of life, that, like a good meal, should be enjoyed with a loved one.

Appetites for food and sex, while assuaged in different manners, often go hand in hand. But the food scene in "Tom Jones," often considered the epitome of cinematic sensuality, pales in comparison to this lusty comedy about Zen and the art of "ramen" making.

Tampopo (which means "dandelion") is a mousy widow who owns a seedy noodle shop and wants to climb the ladder of success by upgrading her noodle soup. She is helped by a truck driver, Goro (Tsutomu Yamazaki), who has her doing stretching exercises, times her in the kitchen and imbibes her with a spirit starved for noodle perfection. Goro, who dresses like a cowboy and calls to mind a gourmand version of Charles Bronson when he was still making saddle movies, rounds up a posse to help him convert this pasta Pygmalian. These kitchen cowboys test recipes, redo the shop, scour other noodle shops for ideas and in a funny dream sequence, challenge the competition to a slurpy showdown.

The film veers off into other culinary directions amid Tampopo's trials. These vignettes have nothing to do with the noodle part of the story, but instead expound upon writer/director Juzo Itami's satirical look at the cultural functions of food. Some of these snippets are more black than rosy, like the woman who rises from her death bed only when ordered to cook dinner, and immediately dies when finished. But the little boy with the tag around his neck telling people he only eats natural food and not to feed him sweet snacks is both charming and funny, especially since his careful parents also tied a carrot around his neck. And then there is the epicurean hobo whose efforts to whip up a plump omelet are applauded by loving camera shots that practically salivate over the egg dish.

The erotic aspects of food are handled by a white-suited gangster who lavishes his prone mistress with an array of condiments before making a feast of her. The two of them also engage in a mind-boggling orgasmic game of passing an egg yolk from mouth to mouth - without breaking it.

These side-dishes are a little loony, but only add to the gustatory fun of Tampopo, a film that seamlessly fuses food with death and sex and art.

It hasn't exactly been a great summer for movies, but when Carl Reiner has been reduced to crotch shots, it's time to pick up a good book.

You could never say that Reiner's work, either as a writer or a director, has been sophisticated, but "The Dick Van Dyke Show" is considered classic television fare, and "All of Me" was a successful, entertaining movie. But last year's "Summer Rental" marked a decided slump in Reiner's movies, and he appears to have hit rock bottom with "Summer School," a lackluster exercise in teen fantasy that is more offensive than funny and was shot as if it were for TV, not general release.

While most of this nasty little film falls flat on it's celluloid face, there are a couple of characters who will hopefully go onto better projects. Dean Cameron as Chainsaw, a fan of slasher flicks, and his buddy, played by Gary Riley, capture your eye immediately with their exuberant humor. Aside from their amour with gore, these two rate life on a Siskel and Ebert scale that is one of the only funny bits in the movie. Cameron, in particular, sashayed through his role as a young reprobate with the kind of easy good-humor many actors never hope to achieve.

But it doesn't really matter if these two young actors surpassed the drivel of "Summer School," because a year from now no one is going to remember this movie. Except maybe Reiner. This flick is going to haunt him for the rest of his life. And then some.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Woodchips congratulates Sergeant Detective Edward Pinato who is retiring after 33 years of honorable dedicated service to the Town of Stoneham. Being a police officer (it seems to me) is a dangerous, thankless job. Most of the time police are damned if they 'do' their job and damned if they 'don't.' So any person who puts up with those conditions for 33 years deserves 'thanks,' 'praise,' and 'admiration.'

Behind every successful man receiving applause center stage, there's a woman standing in the wings. For some it may be his mother, for another his wife, sister or sweetheart who had faith in him and prayed for him. For Edward Pinato it was his lovely wife June, and his four beautiful daughters Susan Pinato, Darlene DeStefano, Debbie Walsh and Diane Vaughn. May you enjoy your retirement with good health, long life and peace.

Michelangelo was a sculptor, painter, architect and poet. Very few know that his last name was 'Buonarotti.' It really doesn't make any difference because he shunned publicity. He chiseled his full name on only one of his many sculptured masterpieces, the famous "Pieta." He was only 23 years old when he finished what the world considers a "Miracle in Marble." Michelangelo worked for four years lying on his back painting the Sistine Chapel ceiling in St. Peter's Basilica. When it was finished the workers took the staging down. At the dedication ceremonies the Pope, with his entourage of Cardinals and Roman dignitaries, viewed the majestic scenes in glorious colors. The Pope then turned to Michelangelo and whispered, "It's truly beautiful — but — don't you think that it needs another coat?"

Attorney Mike Pinelli, president of the Bear Hill Golf Club, congratulated Mike Murgia and Arthur Boyle who fired a six under par 65. The Bear Hill Member Guest Tournament was won by Bill Donnellan and his partner Dave Johnson. When I play golf I usually wear two pairs of pants in case I get a "Hole in One." Angus MacNeil stopped playing on the eighth green and doffed his hat as a funeral cortege went by on a road adjacent to the course. Everyone who saw this gesture of respect was amazed. Like the mail carriers, "Neither rain, sleet or hail" deters Angus from his game of golf — so when a friend asked him why this sudden change, Angus replied, "Well it was the least that I could do, after all I was married to Hilda for 39 years."

Humor is found everywhere, even in the courts of law. My Uncle John Shea of North Reading sued Rowan Fitzgerald for losing a tooth when John accidently walked into Rowan's fist. When Rowan was on the witness stand, John's lawyer said, "Mr. Fitzgerald, all my client wants from you is 'the tooth, the whole tooth and nothing but the tooth!'" Gee, I wonder how many readers I lost with that gem?

I love to visit Joe and Patricia Foley and their children Joey (a baseball and hockey star) and Debbie (a basketball and soccer sensation). The family was watching television one night when I noticed their pet dog applauding with his barking in just the right places in the story. "What a remarkable dog," I exclaimed, "I am really amazed." "Patricia and I were saying the same thing just before you came because Rover hated the book" replied Joe Foley.

New friends of Woodchips (they make up for those I lose because of some of the corny jokes,, puns and quips): Pat Regan; George Varney; Pat Millward of Tewksbury, (a Girl Scout leader and a member of the Polar Bears); Pat's husband Jim, who handles a lot of dough (he is a baker); Jessica Faler and Bob Brennan of Wakefield and Tom Mahoney. Also Jim Curley, Judy McKenney, Paula Curley, Rose (Gargano) Magliozzi and Pam MacFarland.

Chris Curley is six foot four inches tall and of course he is a basketball star. If he gets any taller he will not be 'tossing' the ball 'up' but 'dropping' it through the hoop.

Fr. Edward McMahon of St. Barbara's Church in Woburn promised me he will read Woodchips if his name is in it. Well here it is Fr. McMahon, join other members of the clergy who either love or hate the column.

Prosperity is buying things you don't need with money that you don't have to impress people you don't like.

There's a sign over a door at the Marine Barracks in Quantico Virginia that says, "If you can't lead and won't follow - Get the heck out of the way!"

Going to a party with my wife Kathy is like going fishing with a game warden. I had to take her home early from a party at the Woburn Elks Saturday night, she was so tired she could hardly keep her mouth open.

Edmond Baratta is an international expert on radiation. He just came back from an extended tour of Saudi Arabia where he lectured at various labs and universities. Ed can get a Geiger Counter to tick away just by his 'radiant personality.' Ed found out that a camel is really a 'horse' that was put together by a committee. He also said people never go hungry in the desert because they can eat the 'sandwhich' is there. If Dick Haggerty deletes Woodchips next week it will be because of jokes like that.

I love to visit the Stone Zoo in Stoneham. Last week I invited my cousin Angelo Quagenti to come along. "No thanks," he said, "I'd rather stay home." He explained why saying, "my eldest daughter does the 'kangaroo walk,' my second daughter talks like a 'parrot,' and my son laughs like a 'hyena.' My wife watches me like a 'hawk,' my cook is as cross as a 'bear' and my mother-in-law calls me an old 'gorilla.' So when I go anywhere I want a change of scenery. I know your family Angelo and you're not a 'lion.'

Marriage is like a poker game. It starts with a pair, he shows a 'diamond,' she shows a 'flush,' and they both end up years later with a 'full house.'

"Why don't you bring me candy and flowers like you did before we were married?" "Kathy," I replied, "for the same reason nobody keeps feeding worms to a fish 'after' he's caught it."

I don't see handsome Capt. Dan Gately of the Metro Police anymore because he is in charge of the Charles River Basin area. When he was a Lieutenant at the Revere Beach Station I would see him almost every morning as I walked the beach as a Beachcomber. I wish you the very best Captain Gately of Woburn.

Progress is not always for the best. Indians were never awakened at three in the morning to answer a 'wrong number.'

When my Uncle Dan of Wilmington got his first telephone installed it rang and rang so I asked, "Aren't you going to answer it?" "Why should I," he responded. "I put the phone in for 'my' convenience." I don't blame him, at least he doesn't have to tell someone almost every night that he doesn't want any 'storm windows,' 'vinyl siding,' or his roof replaced.

My first readers of Woodchips were Ed Sargent of Tewksbury, Frank Tuttle of Wilmington, Louise O'Malley of Winchester and Wayne Higden of Burlington. "Thanks for staying with me."

Celebrate Constitution

In less than three months, the United States will observe the Bicentennial of the signing of its Constitution, truly a momentous day in history, and for democracy around the globe.

A first step for a local community in becoming part of this historic celebration is to become a Designated Bicentennial Community for commenorating the United States Constitution. Being a Designated Bicentennial Community simply means having one's local governing body in city, town, village, or country, establish a Bicentennial Committee broadly representative of the Community to develop and approve plans for a commemorative program that will educate its residents about the meaning and significance of the Constitution and having received an official designation from the Federal Commission.

For the Bicentennial Community Application and further information, contact: Massachusetts Advisory Commission to Commemorate the Bicentennial of The United States Constitution, State House, Room 114, Boston, Mass., 02122, Attn.: Margaret Cavanaugh, Exec. Dir., (617) 727-2068.

It is not too late to have your community or county become part of this historic moment. Both the State Advisory Commission and the National Office on the Bicentennial (Address: 736 Jackson Place, Northwest, Washington, D.C. 20503 — (202) 653-9808) are ready to assist in any way — with information and materials for programs, symposia and ceremonies that are designed to educate citizens about the history of the Constitution, its development, why it's unique and has served as a model for the rest of the world, and why the freedoms it guarantees are important to Americans today.

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

From international trade to a musical toaster oven, what you might call the sublime to the ridiculous, COMING ATTRACTIONS usually discovers a little something different for everyone. But we are always desirous of receiving news of events of interest to all. If you know of some, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We find enjoyment in the large and the small.

The sun is 330,330 times larger than the earth.

PASSING DISTURBANCES

Performance Artist Rick Wolff presents Passing Disturbances, a whimsical and disturbing musical tour on the nature of a global electronic communication and information overload, featuring a musical toaster oven, electric fan, and gyroscope on pedal steel guitar, accompanied by call-in questions for Buckminster Fuller on the Larry King show.

Performances are Thursdays through Saturdays, 8 p.m., August 13-22 at The Performance Place at the Elizabeth Peabody House, 277 Broadway, Somerville. Tickets $7/$5 students and seniors. For information and reservations, call 623- 5510. Tickets also on sale at Bostix, Out of Town Tickets and the Somerville Theatre.

LOOKING AT STAKE IN TRADE

A new brochure designed to increase awareness of the consumers' stake in international trade is being released this week, according to Virginia H. Knauer, Special Adviser to the President of Consumer Affairs.

Trade, Trade-Offs and Consumers is written for consumers and illustrates the direct impact of international trade decisions on their daily lives. "Consumers really have the most to gain or lose in international trade debates," Mrs. Knauer said. "Decisions which affect the flow of goods and services across national borders can also affect the choices consumers have and the prices they must pay in the marketplace."

Trade-Offs is a joint project of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, of which Mrs. Knauer is Director, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Federal Trade Commission, the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, and Williamson International. The brochure was printed in cooperation with Avon Products, Inc. It is available free by writing the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 605R, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.
